SUMMARY OF EVENTS OF THE PAST WEEK

CANADIAN

The price of wheat at the beginning of the week was $1.00. C.P.R. stock stood at $14.00. In Croston, B.C., two robbers held up the staff of the Imperial Bank last week and got away with $7,000. They entered the bank at closing time and although the manager fired some shots at them, they succeeded in forcing him to put up his hands and had the vault opened, when they helped themselves to the contents. As soon as they were gone, the alarm was given and a band of pursuers took up the trail and the robbers was captured on the country with about $2,000 of the money. The other has not yet been captured.

The two men, Baker and Sowah, who were sentenced to death for the murder of Captain Gillis, of the liquor smuggling boat Beryl-G, appeared against their conviction in the Appeal Court at British Columbia, but the appeal has been dismissed. They are now appealing to the Supreme Court of Canada. Another man, Morris, is also to be tried for the same crime.

A vigorous controversy has sprung up between Mayor Webb of Winnipeg and W. R. Craig, the Attorney-General of Manitoba, as to the failure to suppress breachers of the liquor law of the province. Mayor Webb has stated that it was the fault of the Provincial Government and the law courts, while Mr. Craig has replied that the city of Winnipeg was responsible for the failure within its jurisdiction.

Sir A. H. Grant, an English mining authority, who has been inspecting several areas in Northern Ontario, has expressed himself as much impressed with the great potential wealth in that area, and has urged the government to get to develop it.

Terence Mathews, a young Canadian flying officer, of the Royal Canadian Air Force, was killed in a flying accident at Camp Borden. His machine crashed on landing, and he was instantly killed.

The sugar beet factory at Raymond in Alberta was opened at the end of last week with some ceremony. According to Dominion statistics the United States imported into Canada for the year ending August last, to the value of $700,000, whereas Canadian exports of coal for the period came to just short of $1,000,000.

The executive men of Calgary have protested strongly against the holding of Armistice Day on November 11th, instead of November 11th, the true Armistice Day.

In connection with the Janet Smith murder case, the grand jury has returned a true bill against six of the men charged with kidnapping Wong Foon-Sing, the Chinaman who was not rescued and acquitted of the crime by Janet Smith. The men who will be tried in consequence of the grand jury's decision are: V. R. Moore, Provincial detective, and W. Robinson, his son; Murdoch, the chief of police of Point Grey; Kirkland, a Provincial detective; and McDonald, a Point Grey police commissioner; and Cowper, editor of the Weekly Tribune. The date of their trial has not yet been fixed.

A scheme for the great enlargement of the paper pulp factories at Port Arthur and Port Arthur has been announced by the Ontario Minister of Lands and Forests. It is stated that this scheme will make Port Arthur and Port Arthur the greatest newsprint manufacturing centres in the world.

BRITISH AND IMPERIAL

A great scheme of empire development in East Africa has been announced by Mr. Amery, the Secretary of State for the Colonies. There will be a guaranteed loan of £50,000,000 for transport development in East Africa. The money will be spent in Great Britain and will help to relieve the unemployment there.

Some discussion has taken place with respect to the Locarno Security Treaty as to whether the British Empire's dominions are bound along with Great Britain by the agreement. It has been definitely stated by Mr. Austen Chamberlain, British Foreign Secretary, that the British Dominions are not bound by the treaty unless they ratify it and specifically agree to it.

Captain Clews, of the C.P.R. train Melita, was shot dead by the chief officer, T. A. Towers, in Antwerp last week. The captain was asleep in his cabin when he was shot, and two of the junior officers who went to his assistance were wounded by the bullet. The cause of the murder is not yet clear, but it has been suggested that the captain was trying to ruin his career with the Company for some reason or other.

the machine struck the water with great force and became a total wreck. Captain Blard managed to free himself and was saved, although suffering from the effect of the immersion in the water and shock of the crash.

FOREIGN

Owing to some trouble on the frontier between Bulgaria and Greece, the origin of which is not clear, the Greeks have sent an army over the frontier into Bulgarian territory, and at the same time sent a 48-hour ultimatum to Bulgaria demanding an apology and an indemnity for Greeks killed in the skirmishing. A certain amount of artillery fire on the part of the Greeks accompanied the advance, and it seemed as if Bulgaria was going to attempt resistance. There was some suggestion that Bulgaria troops at one time had entered Greek territory. The Bulgarian government appealed to the League of Nations, of which both countries are members, and the League has summoned both governments to send representatives to state their case. The military action appears to be slackening, and in all probability a real war will be avoided. The responsibility for the crisis almost certainly lies with the Macedonian revolutionary committee, which exists in Bulgaria, and whose chief is a Greek, and who are in constant conflict and trouble in what is now Greek or Serbian Macedonia. In order to keep alive the claim of the Bulgarians to this territory, the committee is engaged in a campaign of Eastern Macedonia, and is engaged in a campaign of Eastern Macedonia, and is engaged in a campaign of Eastern Macedonia.

To the Electors of the Red Deer Constituency

Ladies and Gentlemen: My last word to you is that I stand or fall by the Meighen programme as stated below.

Protection of Canadian industries, including the farming industry, against undue competition. The manufacture of Canadian raw materials by Canadians in Canada.

A commission to prevent the misuse of the protective tariff in the direction of raising prices against the consumer.

The use of the embargo on Canadian exports to the United States in order to reduce the prohibitive tariff now in force against Canadian agricultural products.

Subsidized freight rates to enable Alberta coal to compete in the Ontario markets and Alberta products in the world's markets.

Imperial co-operation to enlist British capital and population for the development of Canadian resources, both agricultural and industrial.

Reduction of expenditure, debt and taxes by businesslike administration and increase of population. Realize this: 84 countries of the world have raised their tariff since the war. Canada alone has reduced hers. Has the King Government a monopoly of the world's economic wisdom?

CITIZENS!

We, the United Farmers of Alberta, wish sincerely to thank the Conservatives and Liberals of this Red Deer riding for the uniformly courteous and fair-minded treatment they have given the Farmer Candidate, Mr. Speakman, in this campaign.

We have always maintained that the outstanding men and women of both the old line Parties are honest and sincere.

That our country is in dire need of all the brain power that it can secure in rescuing our Canada from her tragic plight.

That it is not fair, sportsmanlike, or businesslike, under the two Party system, to have practically one-half of our Canadians in opposition and without any say in her affairs for periods of four years or longer.

The lessons that organizations like the Elks, Kiwanians, Rotarians and religious bodies have given us concerning unity, have found the U.F.A. a fruitful seed bed.

We want to work with all of you Grits and Tories.

We believe Partyism is stupid, that it separates us at times when we should work together.

Shall we substitute Business in the place of Politics.

We promise to work for the common good of the common people, from whatever source measures may emanate.

The Big Interests will wiggle along without our help. Will you join us by boosting

UNITED FARMERS OF ALBERTA

WEEKLY NEWS BULLETIN

GRAND TRIUMPH FOR ALBERTA BUTTER

The greatest triumph yet scored by Alberta creamery butter was recorded the past week, when it was announced, from London, England, that an exhibit of Alberta creamery butter, salted, made in the plant of P. Burns & Co., at Edmonton, had won first prize and gold medal in the colonial section of the London Dairy Show, one of the largest shows of its kind in the world. This means that this exhibit from Alberta stood ahead of all other exhibits from other parts of the British Empire, not including Britain itself. Two other exhibits from Alberta, made from the plant of the Woodland Dairy at Edmonton, and the Innisfail Creamery, were given high commendation at the show. The first prize in the unsalted butter section went to the Co-operative Creameries of Regina, Sask.

In the colonial section of the show Canada won four out of the six prizes offered for empire-wide competition, and Western Canada took three out of the six. This means that Western Canada butter is recognized in the most discriminating market in the world as the highest quality of butter produced in any of the British dominions. The exhibits from Alberta in the salted section were made under the auspices of the Provincial Department of Agriculture, which gave substantial assistance to the exhibitors.

In enabling them to make the exhibit overseas, it is the first time that Alberta has exhibited in the London show, and it is regarded as a unique triumph for the Alberta dairy industry that the gold medal came to this province, even beating out in competition the famous Zealand dairy butter, which is made under almost perfect conditions.

Naturally, there is considerable elation among dairymen over the fact that Alberta butter has beaten the product from New Zealand. The grading systems in effect in the province have had considerable to do with the rapid improvement of quality of butter manufactured in the plants in the province, and with this latest triumph Alberta butter is likely to be more in demand than ever in the British market, where last year a considerable quantity was sold.

The second term of Lieutenant Governor Brett of Alberta expired last week, but he will continue to fill the office until a new appointment is made by the Governor-General at Ottawa, which will not likely be until after the general elections next week. Dr. Brett has been in office for nearly four years.

BY-ELECTIONS TO BE HELD. By-elections to fill the six vacancies in the Alberta Legislature created by the resignations of members who have entered the federal field, will be held before another session, but as yet no date has been fixed for these elections. The vacancies in the house were created by the resignations of the following members: C. W. Cross, Edson; S. G. Tobin, Leduc; T. C. Milnes, Claresholm; A. R. McLean, Edmonton, Liberals; Dr. Stewart, Lethbridge, Conservative; and W. M. Davidson, Calgary, Independent.

CONTINUED-WIDE PHONE SERVICE. With due ceremony, the inauguration of the continent-wide phone service from Alberta was celebrated last week, when Governor Brett of Alberta conversed over the long distance phone with the state of Montana, Colorado and Arizona, and with Chief Justice Anglin, at Ottawa, Canada. The inauguration of this service, by which Alberta telephone subscribers will be able to converse with any point in the United States and with many points in Eastern Canada and on the coast, was made possible by the co-operation of the Northern States Telephone Co. with the Alberta Government Telephone.

Repeaters have been installed at Lethbridge, Calgary and Medicine Hat, and copper circuits set up from Lethbridge to the boundary of Montana, linking up copper circuits extended north from Shelby, Montana. This has made possible the connection with the transcontinental system in the States. In connection with the historical step taken this week by the Alberta Government Telephone, it is interesting to note that long distance service in the province has grown from 1,000,000 calls to 2,500,000 calls in the past ten years, and that in that time more revenue from long distance has been paid from $350,000 per annum to over $1,000,000 per annum.

The first commercial call over the new universal system was given from Edmonton on Wednesday night, when a resident of Edmonton conversed with a friend in Minneapolis, Minn.

BIG STOCKER SHOW. More than 1,600 head of cattle were disposed of at the auction sale held in connection with the annual stocker and feeder show held at Calgary this week. The high prices of the sale went to L. L. Walters of Olive, who secured the grand championship of the show, and was sold to Burns Co. at the rate of $7.10 per hundred. Mr. Walters' car of short-horn, which won the reserve championship, was sold at $7 per hundred. Savage Bros., of Big Valley, received $7 per hundred for a group of five. A carload of 20 steers owned by Usher Bros., of Scollard, went for $6.50 per hundred.

SOIL SURVEY REPORT

The soil survey report of the Macleod sheet, covering about 24,000 miles, which was prepared by the Department of the Interior, and the Department of Agriculture and the Dominion Department of Interior, Topographical Branch. The report accompanying the map describes the properties of the surface and subsoil of the various types, topography, drainage, crop aptitude, water supply, fertility, and methods of soil management, all of which are of great importance to the farmer. It also contains a brief discussion of the climate and agricultural development of the area, and is, therefore, valuable not only to the farmer but also to the land seeker, colonization agent, district representative, experimental farm, land appraiser, banker, road commissioner, Provincial and Dominion Governments.

ST. LUKE'S HARVEST FESTIVAL

St. Luke's Church held their harvest thanksgiving services on Sunday last, and the services were well attended. A celebration of Holy Eucharist was held at 8 a.m., followed by a concert, and at 11 a.m. At the eleven o'clock service the choir capably rendered the anthem "Thou Violest Earth," (Dr. Greene), in which Mr. Pellet, took the solo part. Stimpert's full choir, a commendable service, was also rendered. In the evening the anthem "All Thy Works Shall Praise Thee" was given. Mrs. J. McLean, W. F. Harris being the soloists. Appropriate harvest hymns were also rendered. The musical service was a most successful training. The soloists each did their part well. The church was profusely decorated with grain, fruit, etc., and presented a pleasing appearance. The Rev. Dr. J. McLean, preached at both services, his text being taken from St. Mark, ch. 4, v. 13, in the morning, and from St. John, ch. 12, v. 24, in the evening. A children's service was held in the afternoon.

WHERE TO SHOP AND WHY.

By Cecile

Brilliant! Winter would seem to be upon us once more, wouldn't it? How lucky are those who have their storm windows on, and their winter bedding ready. Speaking of bedding reminds me of the lovely cosy blankets I found at Bullock & Callender's this week. They are beautiful all wool, and in such warm-looking colors. Why is, say, a buff or red blanket so much cooler than a white one? I wonder! But it is. They also have lots of woollen comforters, with gay covers of prettiness—just the thing for the children's beds.

I was much interested, too, in a dining room suite in old English style. There are eight pieces: buffet (it's 56 inches long, much longer than the average, and thereby affording more drawer and cupboard room), table five diners and arm chair, all very solid and of splendid appearance. A library table in the same style is also to be found there, with shelves for books at either side, a great advantage. Lastly, together with two handsome Jacobean armchairs with velvet brocade seats, would make a splendid set for (and a most desirable room).

The imminence of long winter afternoons and evenings (and the advent of Christmas) caused me to pore over the fancy linen department at Gutz-Evarts. They have a splendid assortment of fancy work both made up and ready to be done. Centrepieces and cushion tops in heavy materials, mostly gaily embroidered in bright colors abound. These touches add so much to the home (especially the children's room) and nothing could be nicer as a gift than a piece of hand work.

In the while I found a lovely large centre in French Quai—a most unique design it is, too. Then there are all sorts and sizes of dollies in Pottery work—Linen and Lace. Some several pairs of pillow slips took my eye, as they are much finer color than the average, and the designs are both original and effective, though the price is not moderate. At Lord's I looked at dresses till I was filled with envy, hatred, malice and all uncharitableness! They have every variety of dress, and one that particularly interested me were a navy crepe afternoon dress. Of strictly tailored design, it was a most useful garment. Perfectly simple, its trimmings consisted of steel buttons and a lovely lace collar, and the cut of the flare that makes the dress, and that needs to be seen to be appreciated.

The other was an evening frock in georgette crepe, of a delicious peach shade. The trimming was of ecru lace, mostly about the neck.

When the new rink is completed, we'll have to turn our attention to a costume for skating, and the flannel suits at Lord's are admirably suited to this purpose. These suits, in all sorts of intriguing shades, are immensely popular for fall and winter wear, being both comfortable and smart.

In the dress goods line I found a fine range of Kashmir cloth. Being softer and lighter than flannel, it makes a lovely house dress, though flannel is not to be sneezed at for that purpose. And for a coat the plaids have a polo cloth is ideal. There's something so good and substantial about polo cloth, well tailored.

I wonder if the witches will be flying on the 31st if the weather stays like this? I expect they would be well to be prepared, anyway, and at Gutz-Evarts' you'll find everything ready for the Halloween party a success. Decorations of all kinds, favors, inexpensive prize novelties, and most artistic paper hats and masks.

All the new fall books are there: Houghton's "The World of the Future," Scott, Neill McLaughlin's, Gene Stratton Porter's, Montgomery's, and many others. And for a coat the plaids have a polo cloth is ideal. There's something so good and substantial about polo cloth, well tailored.

And there's a wonderful Brunswick phonograph, console model. It's a most handsome piece of furniture, and a superb instrument. And there are also bulbs of every variety. There's such a fascination in seeing bulbs growing from day to day into glorious, fragrant blooms.

At Mitchell's Jewellery store I found the newest of the new in umbrellas. They are short, little handles, with ornamental tops, and silk carrying covers. The prettiest, I thought, were those in the fashionable purple shade.

Did you see those hand-painted lamps (table, of course) in the window? And they're colorful and lovely! They're entirely made of glass, and some from Czechoslovakia. They're very bright and pretty, and they're very different. If we can't afford the more artful ones, we can at least have a novel and unique ring if we make a selection from these.

At Johns' furniture store I found I could get linoleum at a price substantially lower than the catalogue ones. It's so much more satisfactory to me, and I can be sure of the quality. I also found a line of beds (including coil springs and mattresses), and a line of good looking and well equipped more advantageously as regards price in Red Deer than in any other place I've just now.

Two bedroom suits particularly interested me: the one in walnut finish, including a dresser and chest of drawers, and the other in ivory. The former is very handsome, being solid and well made, and the latter is the last word in daintiness. Both have unique features, the drawers of the ivory suit being particularly attractive. It's a much bigger type than I've seen elsewhere, and would grace any dining-room.

At Porter's Pharmacy the stationery was a real treat. An English travelling set (with pad, envelopes, blotting paper, all within one cover) would make a lovely gift or prize.

Writing paper, pens and pencils, and these may be had in a new and attractive form. Encased in a beautiful, and the children's Everhart pencil and Fountain pen may be had, in many different types. One is a very attractive, particularly took my fancy—when one gives a gift one likes it to be really good, not just a cheap thing.

And there I found a real novelty in the shape of real beaver putty! Bever is the softest thing obtainable for a putty, will never wear out, and may be cleaned as often as one likes. Do see these—they are simply fascinating.

Are also the compacts, with hand-painted cases, containing both rouge and powder, in a deceptively small case, and a very attractive one.

The last item over which I dallied was a novelty of Yardley's Old English toilet goods, both a case of shaving soap, most compactly boxed in a wooden box, and most delightfully performed, and a set of toilet brushes. If we must be frivolous, let's get a friend in on it. Charity begins at home, you know!

A vote for La France and Meighen and keep our boys at home.

SCHOOL TEACHERS HOLD CONVENTION IN RED DEER

A highly successful convention of the teachers of the Red Deer school district was held on Thursday and Friday of last week. Over a hundred teachers attended, and the varied program presented proved not only entertaining and interesting but also inspiring and practical. In his address to the convention, Mr. W. E. Johnston emphasized the importance of community service, and as the session proceeded, the teachers were made to realize the importance of their profession who had already taken his suggestion to heart, and had spent time and labor in preparing lectures and demonstration lessons of great help to their comrades.

The programme commenced on Wednesday afternoon, when the Rev. Ellis Jackson pronounced the invocation and was followed in addresses of welcome by Mayor Johns and Mrs. W. J. Stephenson, who spoke in the unreservedly enthusiastic manner of a chairman of the School Board. Miss Evelyn Lees presented a most instructive and inspiring paper on "Nature Study in the Intermediate Grades." She had for exhibition a wealth of illustrative material, most of which had been collected at first hand by herself and pupils. Every one was impressed by the extraordinarily high standard and enthusiasm of Miss Lees' address, and one could not help envying those pupils who have the good fortune to study Nature under her direction.

Dr. McAllister of the Provincial Training School spoke on "Mental Deficiency as related to Public Schools," and dealt with the different types of mental deficiency encountered. Mr. H. G. Scott gave a lucid and enjoyable address on "Current Events," dealing chiefly with the League of Nations and the recent troubles in China. He showed how important the Chinese question is to Canada, and especially to the farmers of the prairies, for the Orientals are now taking a real interest in the cultivation of rice and such crops, and have become potential customers of immense possibilities.

Miss Tate, of the Provincial Red Cross Society, next read a paper on the activities of the Junior Red Cross, after which many of the teachers took advantage of her offer to furnish them with primary material and other materials to help with the great work which the Junior Red Cross is doing in the world.

The evening session was open to the public, and the Union Church was crowded when Mrs. Hamilton accompanied the teachers to the singing of "O Canada." Mr. R. L. Gutz-Evarts, and in a happy little speech noted the recent past of the teachers in education as evinced by the conference of the world's leading educators at Elmira, New York, and San Francisco.

Miss Pearl Ebert gave two delightful recitations, and then Mrs. Locke recited a poem which charmed the audience with their sweet singing. Mrs. Nellie McLaughlin now took charge of the program, and for over an hour kept everyone in high spirits as she proceeded with her address on "The Teacher's Every Day Life." Dealing with the problems of the teacher, she related anecdotes in illustration of her points, one of the best of which concerned a teacher who had returned after spending some months in London. A friend who desired to learn something of the experiences of the teacher, "What do you think of the English, Sandy?" "I didn't meet any," replied the teacher, "but I met the friend, 'You've been in London six months and haven't met any English.'" "My business was to meet the heads of departments," replied Sandy.

At the conclusion of the entertainment, refreshments were served to the visiting teachers and friends.

Tuesday morning the session opened with a demonstration lesson on "Teaching Beginners to Read," by Miss Tate. The results of this lesson was to know at once why young children now learn to read in a month what used to take six months by the old methods. A representative of the Alberta Teachers' Alliance next made an appeal to the teachers to support this organization, and then Miss McArthur gave very practical hints on "Busy Work in the Lower Grades." Mrs. G. F. McNally, Supervisor of Schools, showed what should, and should not, be taught to the Grades and Grades V and VI geography classes, and then Miss Bryson outlined her methods of teaching art in the senior grades. The results of these methods were shown by an exhibition of pupils' drawings, which were of great merit.

The annual business meeting followed, in which Inspector Gibson presided. The results of the election were shown by the general interest, and officers were elected for the ensuing year. The convention then broke up into two sections, one staying to hear Mr. Johnston deal with High School and other problems, and the other visiting the Provincial Training School, to which the visitors were escorted in cars by local Rotarians. The party were particularly interested in the work being done at the institution, and no more eloquent tribute could be paid to Dr. McAllister than the affectionate way in which he is regarded by his charges. Before leaving, the teachers were escorted to the hotel, and every one left feeling glad to have had such an interesting and profitable institution where they were able to not only receive the training best available, but where kindness and the professions of the officers.

The officers in charge of the convention were Inspector Gibson, Mr. T. O. W. Fowler, president; Miss Doris Fyke, secretary.

NEW PARAMOUNT

Allice Terry is featured at the head of the cast of the Paramount picture, "Sackcloth and Scarlet," coming to the McElreid Hotel on Friday and Saturday. The picture is an adaptation of George Gibbs' novel, which also ran serially in the Red Book magazine.

The story is one of two girls—orphan sisters—the younger a highflier, irresponsible, the other level-headed, and self-sacrificing. As Joan Freeman, Miss Terry is always looking after and caring for her younger sister until one day the thoughtless young girl leaves a comfortable home in New York and goes West—to visit an aunt—in reality in search of adventure. She gets into difficulties while camping in the Canadian Rockies—a guide is involved.

Sport conditions are very good in New Brunswick this year. Because the prospects for hunting and fishing in northern regions of Quebec are more attractive this autumn than they have been for several seasons, the number of residents of the United States applying to the Quebec association for the protection of fish and game for guides and licenses is much greater than it has been for some time according to the secretary of the association.

A very pleasing incident occurred during the visit to Montreal of Madame Maria Jerzy, world-famous operatic star. Col. George H. Ham, "Grand Union Man" of the Canadian Pacific Railway who had met the singer before, sent his felicitations in the form of a bouquet, and Madame Jerzy was adorned with a bouquet of roses made of sugar with the hope that his days also would be sugar-coated. She gave a one-night recital in Montreal, leaving for Toronto the following day.

Isaac Gouverneur Ogden, vice-president in charge of finance, Canadian Pacific Railway, attained his 81st birthday October 10. Mr. Ogden is as active as ever although he spent 64 years in railway work. He joined the C.P.R. as auditor of the western division with headquarters at Winnipeg in 1881 and has been vice-president of the system since 1901. Mr. Ogden was the recipient of flowers and congratulations from his colleagues on the occasion of his birthday.

Carelessness and lack of forethought on the part of some unknown motorist at Belleville might have led to serious accident if it had not been soon discovered that the wig-wag signal protecting the C.P.R. level crossing on the Kingston Road was out of order. Investigation showed that an automobile had driven out of its course and broken the relay case thereby cutting the electrical contact. A watchman was immediately placed at the signal until necessary repairs had been made.

The Montreal Windsor street station police team are the champions of the Quebec district in the First Aid contests held at the Place Viger hotel in that city under the auspices of the Canadian Pacific Railway. They won the contest against teams from Ottawa and Quebec and are now holders of the Guellet Challenge Cup, emblematic of the C.P.R. First Aid championship of the province. The championship of the New Brunswick district was won by the McAdam team who competed against Saint John and Woodstock.

AMONGST THE SAVAGES OF THE SOLOMON ISLANDS

Narrated by F. de C. Callender.

About 15 years ago I received an appointment to go out to the Solomon Islands as manager of the estates of a British trading company in those islands and I accordingly sailed from London for Sydney in Australia. There I met the Australian partner of the company and was informed by him that the steamer for the islands would not leave for a week or so and that he would be glad to have me come with him to his country home in the Blue Mountains.

The Blue Mountains are about an hour's run by rail from Sydney, and once arrived at the house I found that the situation was extremely beautiful, the windows of the house looking out on to a sea of mountains over which hung continuously a sort of blue haze, arising, I imagine, from various fogs, and giving their name to the mountains.

I had a very comfortable week there, in which time my employer gave me a considerable amount of information respecting my work and the islands in which it had to be done. He was a fine old fellow of a high character and extremely religious. In fact, there was a pretty close association between the company and the missionaries who worked in the islands.

After a week in the mountains we went back to Sydney, and took the steamer for the Solomon Islands, travelling via Brisbane in Queensland. It was not an enjoyable voyage, as the steamer was small and the seas rough, so that we rolled badly. However, I was not by any means alone, as I stood the rough weather better than most of the other passengers. It took about a week to get from Australia to the Solomon Islands, and we finally arrived at the island which is the government headquarters. The islands at that time were shared between Germany and Great Britain. Since the Great War the whole of the islands have been annexed by Great Britain. The British Government was represented by a commissioner with a small white staff. We left the steamer at the island on which the commissioner's residence is placed and stayed there for two or three days before leaving for the island in which the headquarters of the company were situated. In order to get there, we embarked in the company's auxiliary schooner, a small two-masted boat with an auxiliary oil engine. She had a crew normally of eight, including the company's manager, the skipper, and the engineer, who were white men, the other five being Solomon Islanders belonging to the Polynesian race. She was just big enough to carry such a crew comfortably, and a certain amount of cargo. We arrived in her safety at the headquarters of the company which was on a tiny island named Oalo. Why the headquarters had been put on this island it was a little difficult to understand, because it was so small that I could walk right round its shore in three minutes, and it was so flat and little raised above the level of the sea that a tidal wave of any magnitude would certainly have swept clean over it. The company's buildings on the island were quite comfortable and well fitted up.

by the company at 75c a month, and these men were simply savages, ready at any moment to turn on their white employers. The whites invariably carried their revolvers about with them, and kept the flap of the revolver case always turned up, so that they could draw the revolver at an instant's notice. A few of the more reliable of the natives were employed as armed guards both night and day; their duty being to prevent natives from the forest attacking the plantations, and also to support the white men against their own labourers. It might be asked why the guards and the labourers did not make common cause with the natives in the forest to wipe out the few whites? Murdered guarded against by an insuperable policy. No natives were employed on the islands to which they belonged. They were always recruited from other islands and brought in the company's little schooner. To the islands where they were to work. Not one of these men was safe for a moment in another island than the one where he was born, and therefore, if he ventured to desert from his plantation, he could only take to the bush or to the sea, and as far as the sea was concerned there were no boats available, while as far as the bush was concerned he was certain to be killed, and eaten by the natives of the particular island where he was working. By this means a sort of prior loyalty was insured to the whites on the part of the labourers.

I was introduced to the system somewhat vividly soon after I arrived. A tall native came one day to the rolling mill and asked me if I was talking to him. He was one of the armed guards, and the manager said to me, "You had better shake hands with this man, as he is a murderer," and he then explained to me the man's story. He had owned one or two pigs on the island, and one night a woman from the forest had stolen one of these pigs and taken it away into the forest. How he discovered her and how he tracked her I do not know, but he did do it, and he returned with the pig. The relatives of the deceased naturally vowed vengeance on him, and he was perfectly aware of the fact that but for the protection of the whites his life on the island would have been a moment's purchase. This fact made him an enthusiastic and watchful defender of the whites, and he was, in fact, one of the most valuable men in the company's service. His use was brought out in a similar relation to another pleasant institution which I discovered to exist on the islands. There was a permanent feud between the natives who lived by fishing on the coasts of the islands and the natives who lived by hunting in the forests. Neither ventured to leave their own areas except at the peril of their lives, but very strangely every day for about an hour there was a truce between them, when the people of the forest came down to the coast to exchange their produce for the fish of the coast. During this hour of truce the parties met and bartered on perfectly friendly terms, but woe betide any man or woman who stayed outside his own zone for even a few minutes beyond the hour of truce. He was liable to be at once attacked and killed. Every now and again, however, the forest people paid unauthorized visits to the coast, in which case there was always liable to be a fight and bloodshed and our friend the murderer was extraordinarily useful in telling us when these were coming off. It was usually known when the forest natives were out for a fight, for in that case they brought none of their women with them on the visit, and the murderer used to come to us and report that the foresters were coming down on such and such an occasion, but he would say, "It will be alright today as their women are with them." On other occasions the forest natives would come to us and report that "the women are not with them," and such a statement was quite enough to keep all the whites on the alert against an attack.

I myself never had occasion to use my revolver against natives, but I have seen it used by others. Fortunately, the natives, when they became fractious, were comparatively easily cowed by a few revolver shots aimed judiciously close to them. As soon as the cowing had been done with the revolver, the staff followed up the good work with a club and beat the mutinous natives into a proper frame of mind. One small member of the staff named Koch, a gentleman of Germanic origin, only saved himself once or twice by executing a swift leap on to the top of a huge tree stump from which he operated on a mob of natives with his revolver, and successfully managed to reduce them to submission. Many were the instances, however, who worked in the islands were either unwilling or unable to adopt such methods and several of them were killed while I was in the islands. They certainly always carried their lives in their hands, and I had another fairly early example of the dangers to which we were all exposed when I made a little trip in the schooner to a somewhat distant island. We were not able to make the journey complete in a day, and we had to find some form of anchorage for the night. "The seas round these islands are extremely deep and it is very difficult to find places of anchorage. It is impossible as a rule merely to cast anchor offshore. We, therefore, debated what we were to do as we disliked the idea of sailing all night. There were with prices being the comparatively low sum of 50c an acre. These clearings were all made on the coast for the purposes of communication, and also because the interior of the larger islands was far too dangerous to venture into. Consequently the making of a clearing gave rise to trouble, because when the surveyors came to measure off its boundaries, it might be found that the boundaries included a native village, and the villagers not unreasonably objected to having their villages destroyed in order to make a clearing for the white man. It was not that the villages amounted to anything substantial. The houses were built entirely of coconut leaves, which naturally were neither valuable nor involved elaborate workmanship, and therefore were simply knocked down and cleared out of the way when necessary, but on some occasions the resentment of the villagers was sufficiently strong to make a display of force necessary to overcome them. The result is that one of these leaves falling on a man will knock him senseless, and as they do fall each year when the rains come soon after the dry season, anybody who gets in the way of a shower of autumn leaves in the Solomon Islands is likely to remember the fact for a considerable time. Such leaves naturally make fine material for building the primitive huts which are all that the natives need in that land of almost unvarying warmth. There is never any cold weather in the Solomon Islands. The chief trouble is the other way around, namely, the excessive heat during the rains.

Not only are the natives' houses primitive enough, but their dress is even more primitive. Some of the tribes wear absolutely no clothing of any sort. Others aspire to nothing approaching the original fig leaf, as recorded as having been introduced in the Garden of Eden. Altogether, anybody who wishes to study primitive "wild life" amongst the human race could hardly do better than to get a job such as I had as manager of a trading company in the Solomon Islands.

AUTUMN BIRDS' NESTS

It might seem almost like a deliberate revivification of the season to associate birds' nests with the cold, grey skies, damp, silent woods and leafless trees of this time of the year.

This is a good time to find birds' nests, though, and the falling leaves have gradually revealed many of the secrets of bright spring and summer days.

The little bird home, which we knew was somewhere in that bunch of brush, and which we often searched for in vain, now shows up clearly amongst the bare twigs.

A drooping willow branch or handful of poplar leaves had effectively hidden it from our inquisitive eyes.

In every bluff we can now see the crow's nest—too many of them we sometimes think.

The magpies' summer home—with its domed cover of thorny twigs—looks, from a distance, like a large witch's broom against the trunk of a tree.

If you have ever tried to get your hand into one to feel for eggs or young, you will know that it is quite a job to find a way through the rough, prickly mass.

The old birds have things arranged with a front and a back door, so that Mrs. Mag doesn't need to turn around inside, which would spoil her long, black tail.

One of the most conspicuous nests of all is that of the redtail hawk. It is visible half a mile away in the top of some big bald tree.

As usual with this family of hawks—sometimes called gopher hawks from the number of these rodents they kill—the redtail's nest is used year after year.

Every spring the old nest is carefully gone over, the ravages of winter storms repaired, and a new lining of soft strips of bark, etc., provided for the two or three large eggs.

This is done in early May just as the trees are breaking into leaf, and at this time the nests often contain a few twigs of fresh, green poplar leaves.

It seems an odd fancy for members of the fierce hawk family, and makes one wonder why.

Along the edges of the slough, in the cat-tails, and sometimes amongst the willows, there are dozens of red-winged blackbirds' nests.

Supported on the upright stalks, they are beautiful examples of basket-making.

The nests are made of dead grass and reed stems gathered from the water's edge where they are moist and plant, and are so deftly woven and twisted around the supports that the whole dries into a firm, compact structure that will sometimes hold together for years.

If we are interested in such things, we will see many other nests during our Sunday afternoon strolls.

SCOTTISH SOCIETY REORGANISES FOR THE SEASON

Some of them are surprisingly close to sidewalk or footpath.

The Little Mothers have not there quite unconcerned, knowing that the screen of leaves gave them every protection.

The St. Andrew's Society of Red Deer held a meeting on Friday evening last to re-organise for the coming winter season. The President of last year, Charles Sinclair, was in the chair, and Miss Dick, secretary, in charge of the Society's books.

A financial statement was read which showed a most satisfactory condition, there being a balance of $39 to the credit of the Society from last season. It was apparent that the members of the Society had so wish to change the officers who conducted their affairs last season, and practically the same executive was elected as follows:

President, W. Milne; Secretary, Miss Dick; executive, J. Steedman, J. Gell, D. McEwen, W. J. Kirkpatrick, J. Skene, D. B. Ross, ladies' executive, Mrs. Kirkpatrick, convenor, Mrs. Milne, Mrs. Anderson, Mrs. Steedman, Mrs. Gellerson, Mrs. D. McEwen, Mrs. Sinclair, Mrs. Macdonald, Mrs. Mitchell. A bane attempt was made by Jack Skene to land the job of chaplain on to the editor of "The News," but the latter explained that while a poor man, he had his pride. Archie Fyfe, however, indicated that he would take the job with pleasure if he was allowed to recite the 119th Psalm at full length on St. Andrew's night and take up a collection for the deserving chaplains' fund thereafter, and his application is receiving the attention of the executive. The post of bard was allotted to the editor of "The News," who wishes to state that "Surely it is very hard."

After the close of the meeting refreshments were served and dancing was begun and kept up pleasantly till after midnight. For a first meeting the attendance was quite good, and with the same efficient executive in charge as last year, the Society ought to have a successful season.

THE DAY OF DECISION

Tomorrow is election day, when the people of Canada will by their votes determine what their government will be for perhaps several years, perhaps for only a very short time, if no party commands an effective majority. The issues have been abundantly put before the electors through the press and from the platform, and thanks to the use of the broadcasting radio devices more people than ever before have been able to hear the chief leaders in person.

While the tariff has been superficially the outstanding issue, it has been so only because it is the instrument or symbol of another and greater issue. That issue is whether Canada is to proceed on a path of vigorous independent growth, or is to languish in a condition of something like suspended animation. Once again it is the United States which constitutes the main problem for Canadians. That great and powerful country exercises an inevitable influence on Canada, both in respect to trade and to population. By her tariff policy she affects profoundly the economic condition of Canada. By her prosperity she tends to drain from Canada the population which alone can make of Canada the great nation which she ought to become. The recent tariff policy of the United States has had a most adverse influence on Canadian business prosperity, and unless a change can be effected else in that policy or in Canada's attitude towards it, the prospect for the immediate future at any rate is a somewhat dismal one.

The Liberal party and government, either from a failure to realize the position, or from an attitude towards it of comparative complacency, or from sheer lack of initiative and grip, have made no effective effort to meet the situation, and in the present election have made no suggestion that they will make any such effort. Inevitably the States, industrially and financially strong, is at a great advantage in anything like open trading with a country like Canada, comparatively weak in those respects. It is to some extent like the competition between two business firms, of which one has ample capital and staff, while the other has only very limited resources of both, and is rich only in the possession of products for which there is as yet no market available except through the rival firm, which will take only what it wants and on its own terms. Under such circumstances the large firm tends to divide, if, however, the small firm can make a business alliance with another strong firm, which will supply both capital and staff, and with such an alliance at its back says boldly to the large rival: "If you won't take our products on fair terms, you shall not have any of them at all, and we know that you need some of them badly." Then the position is entirely changed. That is more or less the Conservative policy, that Canada shall cease to adopt towards the States an attitude of meek acquiescence in all trading relations and should on the contrary make such conditions for the use of her products as will bring to Canada the greatest amount of population and profit from their manufacture, and at the same time make a vigorous use of the imperial alliance with Great Britain to bring in the capital and population needed to make Canada a great and populous country. It is really Canadian economic independence which is at stake in this election, and involved in that economic independence is the vital question of population, which alone can bring an equivalent growth in prosperity. It seems to be an occasion on which the Conservative policy should appeal to Canadians more than the Liberal policy. It is to be hoped for Canada's sake that the vote of the people tomorrow will show them decisively on the Conservative side.

THE BOYS AMONGST US

This week there is being held in Red Deer a conference of those who are interested in work amongst boys. It is often said at the present time that the young people are not looked after as they used to be and as they ought to be, that they are allowed to go their own way and do as they please with results which are bad. Yet there has passed never been a time when so much thought has been given to the training of boys by men and women not directly responsible for them either as parents or teachers. There are a number of organizations actively engaged in the task of helping growing boys to become healthy, upright men, and doing so from no other motive than a sense of public duty and moral responsibility. Such work as is done by the Boy Scouts organization and others of the same type all over the world is quite impossible of valuation in ordinary terms. It is entirely good, and those who give their time to it ought to be recognized as citizens of the highest class. There are, however, certain considerations which should be kept in mind in this connection. No organization can or ought to try to take the place of the boys' parents. It is they who are primarily responsible for their boys, and if they sit loose to that responsibility, no organization has any right to step in and take over who lightly devotes themselves to bridge parties and pass of the thought of their children with a careless remark that they are at the Boy Scouts' hut.

It is a matter for regret that there appears to be developing between the different organizations for such work signs of jealousy and rivalry such as have been characteristic of the common amongst the many sects of the Christian church from time immemorial. Perhaps it is inevitable that different views should be taken about the methods of work, but if professional workers are going to regard one another with merely professional jealousy, then the essence of the work will suffer fatally. The question of these professional workers is a very important one in this respect. In work of this nature the professional worker is undesirable, and if the growth of organization makes him to some extent a necessity, his employment should be kept to the lowest possible limits. Otherwise there will certainly creep into the work an atmosphere of rivalry, and a spirit of competition for ideas, concealing a real enthusiasm for salaries. Already it seems possible at times to detect a false note here and there amongst the speeches and the tones of the workers. It is a fortunately rare note, but it is there, and unless it is clearly watched for and got rid of when it occurs, it will tend to vitiate the whole harmony and purity of the work. That work is far too good, far too valuable in a critical period of human history for any weakness to be allowed to enter into it that can be possibly avoided.

TURBANS IN TURKEY

In the last year or so there have taken place in Turkey changes, which may be superficial in appearance, but which seem to represent a real and a genuine revolution in national feeling. It will be remembered that after the sensational victory of the Turks under Mustafa Kemal Pasha over the Greeks in Asia Minor in 1921, Turkey by one step after another changed her constitution. First the Sultan, who was the authority as temporal monarch. Then he lost his position as religious chief or Caliph of the Faithful, the Mohammedans. Then a full-blown republic was proclaimed in Turkey, with Kemal Pasha as President, though actually it was not a republic but a slightly veiled dictatorship or at best an oligarchy. Once he was securely in power, Kemal Pasha began to show that he cared little or nothing for time-honored social and religious customs as for constitutional ones. Under his encouragement or at least with his connivance and that of his associates, the ladies of Turkey began to abandon the custom of wearing heavy veils in public, until now they have worn what is known as the headscarf, which has even been mixed bathing tolerated at some of the Turkish coast resorts. Other innovations have followed. Formerly it has been the rigid custom of Mohammedans such as the Turks that no headgear may be worn which prevents a man from laying his forehead in the dust at the daily hours of prayer without removing such headgear. Hence the perpetuation of the fez as the accepted headgear in Turkey. The army was the first sphere in which Kemal Pasha changed the fez. He and his leading officers appeared in public wearing peaked military caps of the regular European pattern, and civilians quickly began to follow the example of their President and to wear ordinary European hats. Then Kemal Pasha turned his attention to the religious orders of the country and particularly to the dervishes. He denounced them, and there seems to be no doubt he did so with entire justification, as mere idle beggars, with no rightful claim whatever to be regarded as holy men. He has enacted that the numbers of recognised dignitaries or ecclesiastics shall be strictly limited, and that only those officially recognised shall wear the garb of holy men, including the turban. He has expressed himself with regard to the turban in most disrespectful fashion, indicating that he considers it not only of no particular sanctity, but even as a stupid and undesirable form of headgear. These are changes which a few years ago would have been regarded as absolutely certain to provoke violent opposition among the faithful followers of Islam, but they have been received in Turkey with hardly a murmur of protest. The significance of this is considerable. It appears to mean that at last the long reign of historic religious obscurantism in the Mohammedan world is coming to an end, and that an awakening is taking place which may become of vital importance not only to Mohammedans but to the whole world. Just as the ignorant superstition of the Christian ecclesiastics checked the progress of science in Western Europe for a considerable period, so the dead tyranny of the Koran and its votaries has arrested progress in the Mohammedan world, and the lifting of that burden might well have an incalculable effect over a vast number of human beings.

There is another incident of recent date pointing in the same direction from a country with close historic links with Turkey. In Egypt during this summer there has taken place the religious trial of one of the teachers in the Mohammedan College, who has been tried for teaching orthodox doctrines. His attitude towards the official heads in Egypt of the Mohammedan religion seems to have been not unlike that of Luther to the heads of the Catholic Church of his day, and like Luther he has been condemned by his church and deprived of his authority within the church. That he should have appeared on the stage of the Mohammedan religious world at all shows that there is a new spirit abroad in that world, and it may be that Islam is about to experience its reformation. What that will mean for Islam and the whole world it is impossible to forecast, but it is certainly well worth watching developments in the immediate future.

LACOMBE NOTES

Mr. J. S. Walters shipped two carloads of cattle this week, which, being exhibited at the annual stock and feeder show at Edmonton on Monday, obtained championship for the best carload of shorthorns and stock. Mr. Walters is the winner of $500 cash, a huge silver cup, and a first prize.

Mrs. F. McFetridge and daughter Blanche returned on Friday from an extended visit to her old home in Eastern Canada.

The Lincoln Community Circle annual report, bazaar, programme and dance will be held at the home of H. R. Dool on Friday, Oct. 30. Admission 50c and 25c.

As a result of the speaker belonging to the Lacombe and N.W. Railway jumping the track, Nick Garbano and J. Davidson of the contracting party were badly hurt. They were rushed to the Hospital as soon as possible, and are recovering nicely.

Mrs. Dyke has moved her millinery store and beauty parlor to the store in the old Royal Bank building on Railway Street and is now open for business.

Mr. Morgan, en route to Fairview Church in his car, had the misfortune last Friday to run into a team driven by Ed. Hunt near the Cannon farm. The driver of the team was not seen, and the team and wagon until too close to render it possible to see anything like a serious accident. One horse also had its leg broken and had to be destroyed. Mr. Hunt's neighbors are looking after the farm for him and have his threshing about completed, and are attending to other fall work. Mrs. Hunt will be unable to look after.

Mr. Colin Caldwell left on Monday for Quebec after spending a most enjoyable holiday with relatives and friends here. He will resume his duties with Laurentide Air Service at Quebec.

Thursday, Election day, will be a half holiday throughout Canada. Everywhere the business and professional men are expected to be out and vote. It is your bounden duty.

SCOUT NOTES

NO. 1 TROOP OF SCOUTS
In the history of the scout movement, to No. 1 troop, a deer horn figures inconspicuously. For a long time this ancient horn, a whitish gray color with dirty underlines, lay unnoticed on the rafters, well out of sight and reach of the irreverent eyes and hands of the younger Scouts. Recently it fell down. It fell down in such a manner as to bring the notice of the reporter on it. It nearly fell down on his head. That made him notice it as nothing else would. He then, calculating that it was a relic of the upper portion of his head and thinking of what nearly was, that the horn had probably fallen down on purpose, with a view of making itself noticed, so to speak, to the reporter, he picked it up, and with a view of making itself noticed, he placed it in its proper position. So here goes:

A long, long, very long time ago, in fact, nearly two years ago, the present club room of this troop was officially opened. On the opening day a large collection of mothers and fathers and three sisters came to our slacks to see that their sons and daughters, behaved properly, or for some other similar reason. With these collected eyes upon them, the boys naturally felt high and strong, and were prancing around the place in great style to loosen the tension.

Now, one very garrulous youth, not now here, who belonged to the Owl Patrol, was called Screech Owl, and he justified the name a thousand times better than does the bird. This youth was foremost in the prancers, also in the talkers, on this particular day. Some of the mothers gave him some work to do; rather, started to give him some work to do, and Screech Owl, looking to his mother, started to prance away from the work and the speaker.

He ran down the little steps that slants down in front of the shack, going at a high rate of speed, when he fell. Some of the mothers saw him fall caught on something, and he took four rapid revolutions in mid-air, and then landed on the bumpy earth in an ungraceful sitting posture. For a moment or so he stayed in that position, while he carefully felt himself over and assured himself that he was not hurt. Then he rose to his feet and walked limping back to the spot from where he had started his somersault.

After staring intently at the ground for some seconds, he called another boy to his side, pointed to the earth, and asked: "What do you think that is?" The other youth squinted at this ground with a wise expression written across his face, and was conscious of the eyes of his mother and two young sisters upon him. Then he bent over closer, looked again at the spot, and said gravely: "I think it's a bump." "Get a shovel," commanded the Screech Owl, and the other did so.

Sporting Notes

They dug for a long while, totally unheeding the curious glances of the bystanders, and at length got down on their already grubby knees and pulled on something. After a sufficient amount of labor and grunts had been expended, they something they had been pulling on suddenly gave ground and the pair tumbled over, grasping in their grimy hands an ancient deer horn. With all due ceremony this was borne to the shack and hid on the rafters.

Now it reposes in grand state above the blackbird's corner, and if any chance visitor should enquire as to its origin, he will be sent to this reporter, who is still feeling the top of his head in a thoughtful manner and thinking of what might have been.

RED DEER DISTRICT BOYS' CONFERENCE OPENS HERE TODAY

The Red Deer district old boys' conference opens today and will be continued tomorrow. It is hoped to make it the best yet held. The conference is being promoted by the Red Deer C.S.B.T. Council, which is composed of the following members: Keith Bennett, Jerry Gaetz, Bob Elsworth, Ernest Wells, Arthur Garries and George Cunningham, and the registered members of Red Deer. The officers of the council are as follows: President, Ernest Wells. Vice-President, Jerry Gaetz. Secretary, Keith Bennett. Treasurer, Mr. W. E. Lord.

This session of the conference will be held at the Baptist Church, except the banquet and the evening session on the 29th, which will be held in the United Church.

The supper for leaders the first evening will be put on by the B.Y.P.U. of the Baptist Church, while the C.G.T. groups of the United Church will serve the banquet the second night.

The conference sessions will open on Wednesday, the 28th, at 8 p.m., and all delegates will be billeted. The conference committee is very anxious to reach especially the few fellows from country districts who are not connected with any group and extend a cordial invitation to these fellows to the conference. Already registrations are coming in, and it is hoped that this conference will be largely attended not only by older boys but by leaders of Sunday School classes throughout the Red Deer district. The conference district takes in from Olds on the south to Ponoka on the north, and all the country west of this section.

Among the features planned is a talk on the appreciation of music by Mayor John of Red Deer. The conference committee extends a cordial invitation to older teen-age boys of the district to gather in Red Deer on the 28th and 29th of October. Taylor Statton and our own Chick Hendry will be on hand for the entire conference.

CORRESPONDENCE

Hamilton, Ont., Sept. 29, 1925.

To the Editor:

Canada has more and a greater variety of natural resources than any other country in the world. Consequently should be the most populous and prosperous of any country in the world.

Why has not this been so? Because we have failed to develop our birthright, rapidly and to the best advantage.

Canada absolutely and immediately needs an embargo, or export duty, for the purpose of making it so that it will soon be the wealthiest country in the world.

To illustrate: The U.S. have an import duty on our wheat of 42c per bushel. Why not Canada say to you, make your duty 10c and take a hundred million bushels, and we will let you have a hundred million bushels of pulpwood at 10c, which is equal to a million cords at $12 a cord.

We breed our fish, put them in Lake Erie to grow, we maintain three or more revenue cutters to protect them from your fishermen, we license our fishermen to catch them, who will sell them all to you for food.

Why not an export duty to pay our revenue cutters, and leave some fish in Canada for you?

The North shores of all the international waters are cooler and clearer, hence the fish are larger on our side, and yet we get very few to eat. Why not an embargo on our saws, and an embargo on our lumber on your lumber, which would oblige you to manufacture your own lumber here, and relieve us of our lumber.

An embargo on our nickel would develop its manufacture in Canada, away further than Matte stage.

A positive embargo on hydro-electric energy is immediately imperative, so all the above developments can be economically produced here, and as the recent Government has admitted the necessity by their inflated export duties, surely an embargo will soon follow.

Reports say towards half the blind, or threatened, or lame, or crippled, agricultural implements sold in the West this year were imported, so when the present war is over, companies in the United States have stocks on hand, an ordinary duty would keep them here, and they would not be able to export them.

Why not an embargo on these kinds of implements, and if they raise the price unfairly, let the Government fix the price for the consumer.

If the Libby-Owens Co. and the Pilkington Co. of St. Catharines, can make efficient glass here for Canada, requirements, why not an immediate embargo on glass, with a Government price fixing clause if abused?

Why not an embargo and price-fixing clause on such articles as rubber, and other goods that are produced here, and particularly from Canadian materials? and bring back two jobs for every man instead of only one hundred thousand, with half a job for each man?

Public ownership construction and operation of our public utilities and public works will insure a job for every man in Canada all the time, and many more at an early date.

If the U.S. puts an embargo on coal for Canada, and we continue too indolent to develop our own Canadian coal, then say to the U.S., give us ten million tons of coal, and we will give you some asbestos.

We must have an embargo immediately on such articles as asbestos, and our only visible salvation, is our raw materials free by just paying the cost of taking it away.

Yours truly,

W. O. SEALEY.

A FAIR ENOUGH TRIAL

Sam, empaneled for jury service at a murder trial, had seemed a little too anxious to serve.

"Do you know the accused?" he was asked.

"The man is a cossack," he replied, realizing that he made an affirmative answer he would be barred from serving.

"Have you made up your mind as to his guilt or innocence?"

"Oh, no, sir."

"You don't think, that you could give him a fair hearing?"

"Yesure," replied Sam, "leastways, as fair as de old cossack deserves."

FARMING NOTES

SHELTERS FOR FEEDING STEERS

(Experimental Farms Note.) With the introduction of diversified farming on the prairie, the feeding of the steer has become a more important consideration from the standpoint of economic beef production.

At Indian Head Experimental Farm a series of experiments have been conducted for the purpose of gaining data relative to the value of different kinds of shelters for the winter feeding of steers in Saskatchewan. The shelters under consideration were stable, open corral with high board fence, and with open front and strong exposure, and straw stack.

From the experiments conducted it has been found that the question of buildings need not deter a man from entering the cattle feeding business.

It has been demonstrated by the permanent farms that feeder cattle do relatively better outside than when housed in expensive barns. Where a corral with a high board fence, about 7 feet high, and a rough straw covered shed will be found very beneficial as a protection from the stormy weather.

These shelters are easily and cheaply constructed on the average farm, and will be found quite satisfactory for all classes of live stock. Through the use of which the rougher feeds and low grade grain can be profitably utilized. For further or detailed information write to your nearest Dominion Experimental Farm.

SUCCESSFUL MARKETING OF HONEY

(Experimental Farms Note.) Successful marketing of honey should mean satisfaction to both the producer and consumer. Bearing his customer in mind, let the producer put on the market the best package of which he is capable.

Let him be sure that the honey that his honey is well ripened and carefully strained that no particles of wax be left. If he bottles his product, let the glass be of the best and his labels, whether for bottles or pails, be attractive.

He should also keep his customer in mind when preparing his sections for the market, and do his best to put them up in the most attractive style, for he must realize that people "buy through their eyes."

Having prepared his product in the best way, let him ask a fair price for it. The public will never begrudge giving an honest price for a good article. Let him not cut his price to secure a sale over his neighbor, for in so doing he damages the industry at large.

To increase the number of his customers he should take every opportunity to disseminate knowledge of the uses to which honey may be put.

The public as a whole is interested in honey, and knows that it is a food that can be made from honey is doubly interesting. This is evinced by the eagerness with which up-to-date housekeepers seek such literature distributed at exhibitions and fairs.

For the consumer, his taste should lead him not to buy cheap honey and then complain of being cheated when he finds that he has secured a low grade.

Let him not voice the absurd statement that granulated honey is adulterated, or that the cheap honey in the country to warrant adulteration, and granulation takes nothing from its food value.

Let him keep his honey in a dry place, not subjecting it to chance of deterioration or fermentation through the absorption of moisture. When the consumer and producer each look for the best from one another we will be much nearer successful marketing.

CANADIAN STORE CATTLE ON THE BRITISH MARKET

One of the outstanding results of the removal of the embargo against the exportation of Canadian store cattle on the British market has been a steady rise of the local markets throughout Canada. It is true that overseas prices have not shown an exceptional profit over home markets except in the case of cattle shipped from extreme Eastern points, nor generally have those shipped been responsible for any losses, and this outlet has certainly tended the home market to a remarkable extent.

Another important feature of the present situation is the increasing popularity of Canadian store cattle on the British market. Shipments overseas to the middle of September this year were 23.5 per cent higher than for the same period in 1924, and 18.3 per cent higher than for the same period in 1923. When it is considered that this increase has taken place in spite of high freight rates and a lack of adequate ocean shipping facilities (due largely to the fact that there is insufficient west-bound freight) no far need be entertained regarding the popularity of Canadian cattle on the British markets.

A further consideration is that under present conditions in Great Britain, meat prices being high, it would appear that white grass is available, live stock is not, which would point to a continuance of high prices for beef and consequently a continued demand for Canadian store cattle. It will not be out of place here to mention that as a result of many experimental shipments (which are to be continued) it has been found that the handy weight steer, i.e., 1,000 to 1,100 pounds, fairly well fleshed but not of good blood type, and showing uniformity and broadness in type and color, is the steer that will best meet the above mentioned continued demand.

It would seem, therefore, that the breeder, feeder and shipper of store cattle to look to a continued profitable market for his produce, provided he has the right kind. Particularly is this true of the Maritime Provinces, where a short land freight haul, and ocean shipment at any time during the year, enable the shipper to realize a greater profit than his western competitor.

DOVERCOURT DOINGS

The weather was fine for about three days last week, and the roads were drying up fast, although near the town they were still bad. Snow began to fall at noon on Saturday, and by Sunday morning several inches were lying, while it continued to fall during the afternoon of Sunday till well into the night of the 25th.

Near Rocky Mountain House the Government are cutting a road south of the C.N.R. to link up with the new Red Deer road.

Ralph Sinclair is obliged to use four horses for the mail these days, and at that it requires some navigating.

Most of the grain has been cut in this district, but there is still some to cut and stook. Owing to the wet weather much of it is still in the field, but a few fine days will see the work all completed.

D. Gibson is busy preparing for his sale on the 27th, and has two men employed preparing the crop in stacks for sale. This will be a good sale, as Mr. Gibson has everything a good farmer needs. He is going to Victoria, B.C., on account of his health.
